Natives of Samoa Drift in a Canoe Sixty Days.

Blow Carried Them Out to Sea. Terrible Suffering—Missionary Packet to the Rescue.

(New Zealand Herald).

While on their visit round the Ellice Group, the mission yacht, John Williams, picked up a shipwrecked party of Samoans on the island of Nuanu, the northern-most island of the Ellice Group. It appears that 22 Samoans left the island of Tuvalu in a large boat for two islands some 60 miles to the westward. They were blown out of their course and drifted before the wind for 60 days until they eventually made the island of Nuanu, which is about 50 miles in a direct line from their starting point. Nearly half of the party died in the boat, one was killed in landing, and some died on shore having only the eight survivors. They ate their eggs and spread their sails to catch the rain, which fell heavily, and which they stored up in some trade leaves they had on board. The island they eventually reached is inhabited, and the people took all possible care of them, but they were in a very low condition when the steamer picked them up. They have since been returned to their homes.

Notice to Ship Captains.

U. S. Branch Hydrographic Office, San Francisco, Cal.
By communicating with the Branch Hydrographic Office in San Francisco, captains of vessels who will co-operate with the Hydrographic Office by recording the meteorological observations suggested by the office, can have forwarded to them at any desired port, and free of expense, the monthly pilot charts of the North Pacific Ocean and the latest information regarding the dangers to navigation in the waters which they frequent.

Mariners are requested to report to the office dangers discovered, or any other information which can be utilized for correcting charts or sailing directions, or in the publication of the pilot charts of the North Pacific.
